

Dead Man Walking

Helen Prejean was the author of “memories of a dead man walking” (1993), she argues that humans don’t have the right to take another humans life. She talks about her experiences with prisoners on death row and how it has changed her perspective on the justice system. She wrote this piece to spread awareness on the reality of death row, in order to educate people who are unaware of the situation. The intended audience who have the same views as Helen and that want to learn more about the justice system and how it affects peoples lives.

Dead Man Walking

Helen Prejean was the author of “memories of a dead man walking” (1993), she argues that humans don’t have the right to take another humans life. She talks about her experiences with prisoners on death row and how it has changed her perspective on the justice system. She wrote this piece to spread awareness on the reality of death row, in order to educate people who are unaware of the situation. The intended audience who have the same views as Helen and that want to learn more about the justice system and how it affects peoples lives.

Dead Man Walking

Helen Prejean was the author of “Memories of a Dead Man Walking” (1993), she argues that humans don’t have the right to take another human’s life. She talks about her experiences with prisoners on death row and how it has changed her perspective on the justice system. She wrote this piece to spread awareness on the reality of death row, in order to educate people who are unaware of the situation. The intended audience who have the same views as Helen and that want to learn more about the justice system and how it affects people’s lives.

Dead Man Walking

Helen Prejean was the author of “memories of a dead man walking” (1993), she argues that humans don’t have the right to take another humans life. She talks about her experiences with prisoners on death row and how it has changed her perspective on the justice system. She wrote this piece to spread awareness on the reality of death row, in order to educate people who are unaware of the situation. The intended audience who have the same views as Helen and that want to learn more about the justice system and how it affects peoples lives.